

NON-ALCOHOLIC WINES

A growing trend in the market due to increased consumer demand, the quality of non-alcoholic wines has greatly improved over the years. A de-alcoholized wine starts off as a regular wine from which the alcoholic content is removed resulting in a drink that looks, smells, tastes, and feels like a regular wine minus the alcohol.

NON ALCOHOLIC READY TO DRINK

A tricky category for sure, these alcohol-free beverages are in a class by themselves. They aren't mixers or sodas, they aren't wine, beer, or spirits, but trying to fill this wide open segment that replaces premixed cocktails, coolers, and RTDs. Whatever your reason for abstaining, these might warrant a closer look for a get together, morning or afternoon tippie, or just as an alternative. Tom Firth

NON-ALCOHOLIC SPIRITS

This is such a crazy category for me. I don't mix a lot of my own drinks at home, so I absolutely love the convenience that can be found here. Many of these bottles can make for a refreshing drink, but have such utility in a punch, family friendly cocktails, and even just something a little different. Best to ask at your local bottle shop, but these also might be showing up on some grocer's shelves too. Tom Firth

NON-ALCOHOLIC BEER

The days of your local bar or bottle shop only having one option, and that option being the same as everywhere else, are thankfully behind us. Like the rise of craft beer in general, there is now a wealth of options, and within that wealth are some that don't just stand out as good non-alcoholic beers, but delicious beverages in their own right. If your local still only has one barely passable option, maybe leave them a copy of this list... Bill Bonar
